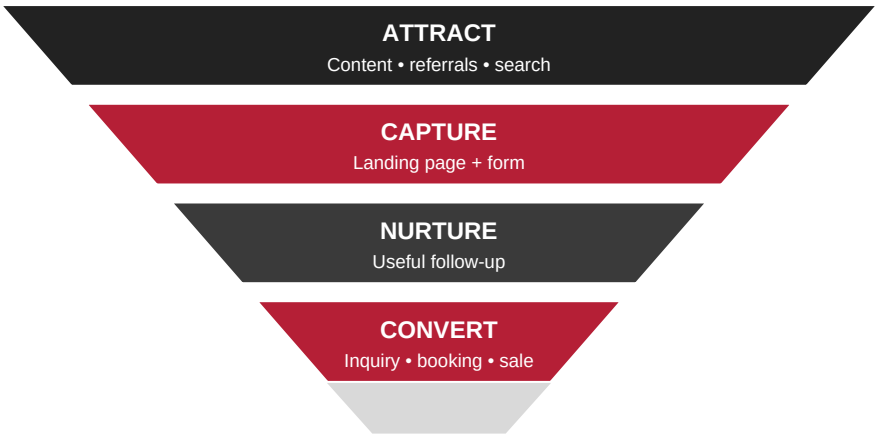
CREATED BY NEIL | LEAD FUNNEL BUILDER

A practical starting point—not a promise of guaranteed leads or sales.

HOW A LEAD FUNNEL WORKS

A clear path from first contact to customer action



THE RIGHT NEXT STEP

A call • a viewing • a booking • a purchase

01 | Understand the Lead Funnel

A lead funnel is a simple, intentional path that helps someone move from discovering your business to taking a next step—such as requesting information, booking a call, or considering a product.

THE GOAL

Help the right people understand your offer, take a clear next step, and give your business a reliable way to follow up. A funnel supports the sales process; it does not guarantee leads or revenue.

The four stages

1. ATTRACT

Help relevant people discover you through useful content, referrals, search, partnerships, or advertising.

2. CAPTURE

Give interested visitors a focused page and a simple form or inquiry action.

3. NURTURE

Respond with relevant information, answer common questions, and build trust over time.

4. CONVERT

Invite prospects to book, request a viewing, ask for a quote, or purchase when they are ready.

What a funnel should make easier

- Clarity: visitors quickly understand what you offer and who it helps.
- Capture: interested people have an easy way to contact you.
- Consistency: inquiries do not depend only on remembering to check every platform.
- Follow-up: each lead has a clear next step and a person or process responsible.

KEEP THIS IN MIND

A funnel guides people forward; it cannot fix an offer that does not meet a real need, poor-quality traffic, or missing follow-up.

02 | Build the Core Pages

A starter funnel can be simple. Each page has a specific job. Keep the copy focused and remove distractions that compete with the main action.

Landing page

Use one audience, one offer, and one primary action. Include a clear headline, short explanation, three to five benefits, genuine proof where available, and a prominent call to action.

Lead capture form

Ask only for information you actually need. First name and email may be enough for a free guide. For appointment-based services, request only details needed to respond. Explain how submitted information will be used.

Thank-you page

Confirm the submission and explain what happens next. Provide the promised resource or tell visitors when and how they will receive a response. Offer one relevant next step.

Follow-up

Send the promised resource, respond to inquiries, and use a clear follow-up process. Automated email needs a properly configured sending setup; manual follow-up can work while you are starting.

A simple landing page formula

HEADLINE	SUBHEADLINE	BENEFITS
State the outcome or problem the offer addresses.	Explain who the offer is for and what they will get.	List three specific things visitors can learn or do.
TRUST	CTA	PRIVACY
Use a relevant introduction, sample, testimonial, or proof only if genuine.	Tell people exactly what to do next.	Explain how contact information will be used.

KEEP IT FOCUSED

Avoid several unrelated offers on one page. One audience and one primary call to action usually make the page easier to understand.

03 | Match the Funnel to the Audience

The structure stays similar across industries, but the offer and next step should fit the audience and the problem they want to solve.

AUDIENCE	LEAD MAGNET / OFFER	NEXT STEP
Real estate professionals	Buyer guide, neighborhood guide, valuation request, or listing information.	Request property details or schedule a viewing.
Coaches and consultants	Checklist, workbook, self-assessment, webinar, or strategy session.	Book a discovery call or inquire about a program.
Course creators	Free lesson, mini-training, course outline, or worksheet.	Explore the course or join a relevant launch list.
eBook sellers	Sample chapter, reading guide, template, or related checklist.	View the book, read more, or purchase.
Service businesses	Estimate request, service guide, consultation, or booking inquiry.	Request a quote or schedule an appointment.

How to choose a lead magnet

- Solve one small, relevant problem—not every problem your audience has.
- Make the value obvious before asking for contact details.
- Deliver what you promised and explain when it will arrive.
- Connect the free resource naturally to your paid service or product.

EXAMPLE

A coach could offer a “5-Point Offer Clarity Checklist.” On the thank-you page, invite readers to book a consultation if they want help applying it.

Quick planning prompt

Finish this sentence before building: “I help [specific audience] solve [specific problem] with [useful offer], so they can take [clear next step].”

04 | Write Copy That Guides Action

Use plain language. Visitors should quickly understand who the page is for, what they will receive, and what to do next.

HEADLINE FORMULA

GET [USEFUL OUTCOME] WITH [SPECIFIC RESOURCE]

Example: “Plan Your Next Property Search With Our Free Buyer Checklist.” Avoid broad promises such as “Get unlimited clients” or any claim you cannot prove.

Opt-in page quality checklist

■ The headline speaks to one audience and one relevant need.	■ The page explains exactly what the visitor will receive.
■ The benefits are specific, useful, and easy to scan.	■ The form asks only for necessary information.
■ The call to action is clear and consistent across the page.	■ The page works well on a mobile phone.
■ The privacy notice explains how information will be used.	■ The thank-you page confirms the next step.
■ The promised resource or response is delivered reliably.	■ The form and every link have been tested before launch.

Common mistakes to avoid

TOO MANY CTAs

Several competing actions can confuse visitors. Choose one primary next step.

VAGUE HEADLINE

A headline that could describe any business does not explain why this offer matters.

TOO MUCH FRICTION

Long forms can discourage people before they finish.

UNREALISTIC PROMISES

Do not guarantee outcomes that depend on many factors outside the funnel.

NO DELIVERY PLAN

Do not collect email addresses without delivering the promised resource or explaining follow-up.

NO TESTING

A broken button or form can waste the traffic you worked to attract.

05 | Plan Your First Funnel

Use this worksheet to turn the idea into a simple build plan. Keep the first version small enough to launch, test, and improve.

1. AUDIENCE
Who exactly is this funnel for?

2. PROBLEM
What specific problem or need are they trying to solve?

3. OFFER
What resource, consultation, or information will you provide?

4. TRAFFIC SOURCE
Where will the right people discover this page?

5. CAPTURE METHOD
What minimum information do you need to collect?

6. THANK-YOU ACTION
What should happen immediately after submission?

7. FOLLOW-UP
Who responds, how, and within what timeframe?

8. SUCCESS MEASURE
What will you track: visits, opt-ins, inquiries, bookings, or sales?

06 | Launch, Measure, Improve

A funnel is a process to test and improve—not a one-time design task. Check that every step works, then use real behavior to decide what to improve.

Before launch

TEST THE FORM

Submit it yourself. Confirm that the information arrives where expected and that the thank-you page loads.

CHECK MOBILE

Review the page on a phone. Check spacing, readability, button sizes, and form fields.

VERIFY DELIVERY

Make sure the promised guide or response can actually be delivered.

REVIEW PRIVACY

Use an appropriate privacy notice and consent process for your audience and location.

Metrics worth tracking

METRIC	WHAT IT TELLS YOU	WHAT TO CHECK
Page visits	How many people reached the page.	Is your traffic relevant to the offer?
Opt-ins	How many visitors submitted the form.	Is the offer clear and valuable?
Inquiries / bookings	How many leads take the next step.	Is the next action relevant and easy?
Qualified leads	How many leads fit your target customer.	Are you attracting the right audience?
Sales	How many leads become paying customers.	Review offer fit, follow-up, and sales process.

REMEMBER

More traffic is not always better. Aim to attract the right people, deliver what you promise, and make the next step easy. Results depend on the offer, audience, traffic quality, follow-up, and sales process.
